OUT AT THE BIG SHOW.

NOTES FROM THE EXPOSITION.

The Races Begun Yesterday, and Will be Centinued To-day, Beginning at 1 O'Clock-A Fall From a Tight Rope.

The usual attractiveness of the Exposition was enhanced yesterday by racing, which began about 1 o'clock. The attendance, however, was not large, and there were perhaps not a thousand people who witnessed the feats of the thoroughbreds.

Many who came to the grounds seemed to feel no inclination to go over to the track, and roamed about the booths of the main hall and the sights to be seen on the outside of that building.

The weather was delightful, and was an incentive for many Richmonders to pay the place a visit. Then, too, there were quite a number of strangers were quite a number of strangers within the gates, and the latter were especially interested in the many features of the Exposition. Swelldom, too, was out, and the pretty freeks of society's maidens lent a pretty effect about the buildings, galleries and grand stand. Some of them with sporting proclivities "dropped" coin with the fakirs, while others contented themselves with doing the merry go-rounds, having their pictures "took" and eating Coney Island saussiges, PRUITS AND PLOWERS.

In one of the buildings just in rear of the main ball there were many visitors, for the fruit, flower and vegetable show was to be seen. There is a splendid display, complete in excellence and variety, and there is also in the building home made cakes, preserves, etc. A committee of judges, consisting of several ladies, were busily employed throughout yesterday making the awards. It was quite a tedious task sampling cakes, tasting preserves and finding out the excellence of Quite a number of stands have been eted since Saturday in the "back spending money on everything, from the phonograph to the pop-corn man. The Coney Island sausage man has arrived with all of his pristine splendor, and his stentorian notes can be heard every few moments calling the attention of passers-by to his wares. The dish with a little German mustard as a mayonaise dressing is palatable, and better still—is hot. Then there is the pop-corn man, who has opened business at the old stand. And the peanut vender is present, and the lung tester and the shooting gallery, and every possible known device to anuse and at the same time bring in to the owner the coins of the realm.

Southern niclodies were heard through-out the western wing of the main build-ing yesterday afterneon. At Butler & Bosher's booth a sextette of jubilee singrendered pleasing songs and attracted a large crowd

That dainty little lunch served at the Horsford booth attracts general attention, and there are a great many visitors who stop each day and enjoy the light and wholesome bread and the cup of invigorating beef tea.

THE CATS.

The cat show, in the music hall, attracts crowds at every performance, and the natics of the automata are ever pleasing and enjoyable. There is a lifelikeness about the creatures that speaks well for the inventor, and the children particularly are ever pleased.

The St. Belmos, in the same hall, also give pleasure to visitors. They do a startling mid-air act, and the finale of their performance partakes of the wonderful. There are two of the Belmosman and womau—and the latter is very graceful in her perilous feats.

TO ME. CANDLISH.

A member of the committee on privi-leges handed me the following yester-

To the Press: In reply to Mr. Candlish's open letter of yesterday about gambling and fakirs at the Exposition grounds, I desire to say that the Society contracted for the customary privileges and minor amusements on the ground restaurant with a responsible party. In disposing of these privileges the Society expressly stipulated that nothing illegal was to be licensed or admitted, and their character and location was to be subject o the control of the committee on privileges, and if such illegal practices as Mr. Candlish intimates, without designating, have been going on in the grounds it was without the knowledge of the committee in control, and it would have been quite proper for him or any other citizen to report them to the officers of the Society, or the civil authorities, when they would have been immediately stopped.

I have just made a trip all around the grounds, and fail to see anything in my opinion that is illegal or contrary to law. opinion that is illegal or contrary to law, or anything more than the ordinary games of chance which have always been allowed at fairs all over the country, and similar games which have been considered admissible at city fairs and bazaars and other like entertainments.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

The Tight-Rope Broke and the Man Badly Hurt-Night at the Exposition

This is an unlucky night with us, said the muscular but pretty young woman who takes part in the bicycle act at Pain's

Paris to me last night.

She stood on the step outside of the frame building in rear of the scenery of that show, on the Exposition grounds, with a heavy cloak, waiting to hear the news from next door, where two doctors were working hard to restore to consciousness poor Jean Weitzman, the tight-rope walker, who lay apparently lifeless from a fall of twenty-five feet.

She was in real distress, having known the man as a fellow showman for a long Paris to me last night. the man as a fellow showman for a long time, and showed a woman's sympathy as well as the feeling akin between peo-ple whose means of living is so hazard-

This was the second exhibition of the This was the second exhibition of the attractive spectacular show, pageant and pyrotechnical display, which is the main amusement feature of the Exposition. The stands, wheels, shapes and other fireworks taken down Saturday night to save destruction from the rain had been replaced, red calcium illuminators added brilliancy to the dazzling scene, and a crowd of four thousand well-pleased spectators watched the ever-changing movements, light life and activity presented in front. sented in front.

AN ACCIDENT.

The opening pageant over, the wonderful bicycle performance took place, and here the bad luck commenced which the young woman referred to. One of the young men fell; his movements were dexterous and calculated to conceal any awkward knocks, but nevertheless he dexterous and calculated to conceal any awkward knocks, but nevertheless he has bruises to nurse to-day. Then the lively little juvenile, whose wheel, like himself, is on a miniature pattern, twice had his wheel to fly in pieces while rapidly revolving it in the air suspended by his father's strong hands. There were hurts attendant here, too, but these were not serious, and while not uncommon, they are not frequent. In discussing the matter last night, the young woman said: We go sometimes for months and never have a bitch, and then a string of accidents will all come together.

dents will all come together.

The starting accident which caused her and a number of other performers to make hurried inquiries of anybody who came out of the closely-guarded door near by, was of a more serious character, however.

When the festival in fro.t of the emperor's palace was at its height and the interest was high, a figure dressed in white was rapidly drawn to the top of a tall pole, and after taking in his hands and carefully poising a balancing rod. a tall pole, and after taking in his hands and carefully poising a balancing rod, he stepped forward cautiously upon a taught wire rope running across the entire width of the scenery, twenty-five feet from the ground. Men stood at intervals with guy ropes to steady the long stretch of wire. The rope-walker tested the narrow line cautiously at first, and then seeming to be satisfied, stepped out more boldly, passing over a square net arrangement swung to aid in some special act not far from the starting place. cial act not far from the starting place. Those who watched him said with a laugh he is pretending, but no the rope perceptibly gives, the man tries to turn and reach the net, he takes one step and the ropes suddenly gives away altogether and clutching his bals — le he drops like lead to the cruel planks below.

There is a moment in which not a sound is uttered, and then there is a rush and hubbub and he is carried out of sight, and by a dint of scoiding from the managers the performers are made keep the entertainment moving as if

"His face is badly cut, and he is much stunned, but not very dangerously hurt' was Dr. Hoge's reply to my hurried inquiry.

The manager said he had been performing with him for ten years and this is the first accident he ever had.

I asked his opinion of the man's condition. He said he thought it likely that he would be able to perform at the next exhibition. The performance last night was completed without a hitch, and the pyrotechnics were novel and beautiful. A portrait of Mr. A. M. Tyler, the secretary of the Exposition, in fire, while not a striking likeness, was a wonderful picture considering its material and size. NOTES.

Racing will begin to-day at 1 o'clock promptly. There still exists considerable difficulty to obtain a glass of water in the main hall of the Exposition. Why cannot a couple of large coolers be placed at convenient points?
The grounds and buildings are now excellently policed. There is a force of fifty men during the day and about thirty at night. The Battle of the Crater will e admirably presented this evening. Morris' illusions prove to be most entertaining and puzzling. There is a per-formance about every half hour in an and crowds flock to witness the mermaid amplitrite, the living statue, the wizard and the half woman. The entertainment borders on the artistic, and possesses a rarity for this fin de siecle age, that rarity being novelty. For the small cost of admission one sees more there than anywhere else about the place, and everyleaves the improvised play-house delighted. Former attempts at illusions in this city fade into insignificance compared with those produced by Pro-fessor Morris, and not only should the country sisters, cousins and aunts at-tend, but all the city folk should go if to see something worthy of their attention.
